Dear Hilary Abbott,

I'm writing to express my concern that the proposed CVRD zoning bylaw changes may negatively impact our community. While the intent may be to streamline regulations, the shift toward broader, more restrictive zoning could limit property use, reduce flexibility for homeowners, and place added pressure on rural and agricultural landowners. Many residents feel these changes risk undermining long-standing community character and economic sustainability, particularly for those who rely on their land for livelihood. I believe more consideration is needed to ensure these policies support—not hinder—the people who live and work here.

Sincerely,
David Jollymore
