Hi there,

I'm a mom living in Cobble Hill, and I just wanted to speak up about the proposed changes to the food truck rules.

Food trucks are such a simple but meaningful part of our community. As a parent, having somewhere casual to take my kids for a treat, meet up with other families, or just get out of the house without it being a whole big production really matters. It's those small, everyday things that make living here feel good.

The new rules honestly feel like they would make it really hard for these small businesses to keep going. Packing up every day and limiting hours like that just doesn't seem realistic, especially for local, independent operators.

Places like this aren't just "businesses" they're part of the rhythm of our community. My kids get excited to go, it gives us a reason to get outside, and it creates a space where people actually connect.

I really hope you'll reconsider these changes and find a way to support food trucks instead of making it harder for them to exist.

Regards,

Katie Hankins
